ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Researcher wish to express sincere, heartfelt appreciation to those involved in the completion of this research with successfully.

First and foremost, researcher would like to express special appreciation, deep gratitude and thanks to research supervisor, Dr. Amer Darus, who has been always there to continuous guidance, advice and generous amount of time in helping to complete this research. His remarkable unique ways and professionalism of handling researcher’s weaknesses has turned the simplistic mind to see things in more rational view. It is really a great pleasure to learn from someone who is professional like his.

Great appreciation extended to my friends and family whom helped to stimulate or concretize some of the ideas directly or indirectly, knowing or unknowingly, at different stages of researcher’s thought development process and throughout in the completion of this research. Without their endless sacrifices, constant love and steadfast support, researcher would never have reached this level.

Thank you very much.
ABSTRACT

The purpose of this study was to investigate the factors affecting job satisfaction at Tang Dynasty Hotel in China. In this study, I only referred a case study, because the Tang Dynasty Hotel is the five-star hotel in Xi’an in China, a total of 12 departments, a total of more than 300 employees. The data was collected and administered by means of by Smith, Kendall & Hullin, as Job Descriptive Index (JDI).

The study showed that organizational factors such as job itself, work environment, and interpersonal relationship influenced employee job satisfaction in Tang Dynasty Hotel. On the other way round, it was found out that salary and promotion did not really determine the employee’s perceived job satisfaction.

My case study might be based on effective organizational performance in the Tang Dynasty hotel in China, the hotel employees need to be motivated in terms of the nature of the job, the working environment and interpersonal relationship among the workers. There is need for improvement in these three areas.

The findings of this study is of immense benefits to the Tang Dynasty Hotel in China and will enable them to gain better competitive advantage to be able to compete among international five star hotel since the findings will assist the hotel organization to know the best way of satisfying the employees.

CHAPTER 1
INTRODUCTION

1.1 Introduction
This chapter forms the introductory part of the project and it gives the general overview of the entire research process. This study mainly discusses current situation of hotel employee’s level of job satisfaction and the elements impacting on the level. This chapter discusses the background to the study, the problem statement, research objectives, research questions, scope of study, and significance of study and limitations of the study.

This project only refers the Tang Dynasty Hotel in China.

1.2 Study Background
The value of hotel product is reflected in the satisfaction of the hotel employee providing service (Sisson, 2002). The attitude, words and deeds of the employee are also integrated into every service which has a great impact on level of customers’ satisfaction.

Although, there have been several definitions of employee’s job satisfaction (Hoppock, 1935; Vroom, 1964; Alderfer, 1972), the research will like to come up with that defines employee’s satisfaction as emotional response given to the job and
