ABSTRACT

This study examined the relationship between job characteristic and organizational culture towards the organizational commitment among the employees in Universiti Kuala Lumpur (UniKL). Data was gathered through distributed questionnaires answered by 115 respondents from employees in City Campus which located in Kuala Lumpur. Data was analyzed using the Statistical Package for Social Sciences (SPSS v.12) where descriptive analysis was used to analyze the social demographic variable of the respondent; Pearson Correlation was used to study the existence of the relationship and the Multiple Regression Analysis was used to analyze the level of significant relationship between job characteristics and organizational culture with the employees’ organizational commitment. Findings of the study revealed that there is significant and positive relationship between organizational cultures with the organizational commitment in UniKL. However, no relationship is significant to the other determinant (job characteristics). The study has also indicated that the organizational culture is more dominant as a factor in influencing the organizational commitment.
ABSTRAK

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In the name of ALLAH, Most Gracious and Most Merciful. First and foremost, Alhamdulillah, praise to Allah Subhanahhuwata‘iah for giving me the will and strength in enduring challenges in completing this project paper.

To my beloved husband, Saharuddin A. Kadir, thank you for your endless support, understanding and taking on many of our family responsibilities to accord me time I needed, to my dearest parents, sisters and brothers for their prayers and also to my wonderful children, Ayuni Ernenatasya, Afiq Danial, Aniq Haikal and Alya Batrisyia, who may not understood my commitment but believe me, you are always be my fountain of inspiration,

My profound gratitude and thanks to En. Ghazali Din, supervisor for this study, for all assistance rendered and advice generously given to me and to all lectures of Universiti Utara Malaysia who have relentlessly imparted their knowledge during my entire Master’s programme.

My sincere appreciation to all UniKL staff who has unhesitant spent time filling the questionnaires in spite of their busy schedule and to my bosses, En. Hisshamuddin Omar and Pn. Juriah Bilot, friends and colleagues for their continuous encouragement and assistance provided

Thank you Allah, the Almighty, for all that I’ve achieved in my life.

CHAPTER ONE
INTRODUCTION

1.1 Introduction to the Study

Venturing into a higher education business in Malaysia is becoming very competitive as the number of public and private higher education institutions in the country are growing very fast and the trend of the rapid growth will continue in decades to come befitting Malaysia as a new educational hub in the region. The challenges evolved not only in getting enough students but also to attract and eventually retain competent people to run the business is double the effort.

As human capital is the most valuable asset in executing strategy and differentiating from competitors, the commitment of the employees is a major factor in determining the future success of the organization.

This study was conducted to gain a greater understanding on the impact of individual job characteristics and organizational culture to the organizational commitment of the employees. Ultimately, the result from this study can be used to improve the organization by ensuring that management is in tune with the needs of employees and by ensuring employees are aware of the organizations needs organizational commitment can be improved.
