Chapter One

Introduction

1.1 Introduction

Human resources consist of individuals who make up the workforce of an organization. Human resources is also the name of the function within an organization in charged with the overall responsibility for implementing strategies and policies relating to the management of individuals.

The human resources function is also important in library. The importance of human resources increases in libraries and in many other areas, where human resources people get a lot of information and advice and expertise human resources has an important role in libraries (Rao.K, Babu.K, 2001).

The field of strategic human resources management has enjoyed a remarkable ascendency during the past two decades, as both an academic literature and management practice (Bidmeshghipour.M, 2009). Give a broader approach to looking at strategic human resources management by integrating various functions and establishing the linkage of these functions with the business plan, it is important not only to identify human resources competencies in concurrence with the business needs and to develop selection and development practices to secure those competencies, but also to evolve and implement a performance evaluation plan that links the performance of the employees to the strategic goals (Singh, 2003).
