ABSTRACT

The purpose of this study is to investigate on the family-friendly benefits such as flexible work arrangements, family care benefits, child care facilities and benefits, and also managerial support towards employees’ job performance. A survey of a representative sample of 275 respondents was used in this study. A quantitative method was used in this study by distributing the questionnaires to the respondents. The data from the questionnaires then were analyzed by using Statistical Package for Social Science (SPSS) version 25.0. Descriptive analysis was conducted to ascertain data normality as well as to analyze frequencies of respondents’ demographic profile. Multiple regression analyses were performed to test the hypotheses of the study. Based on the results, all of the independent variables have significant relationship with job performance. Finally, there were several recommendations and directions for future research discussed in this study.

INTRODUCTION

1.0 Introduction

Over centuries, there are a lot of dramatic changes happened in almost every aspects whether in lifestyle, economic, the booming of scientific findings, as well as the workplace. Before the globalization took over where the world is now borderless and people are connecting through the virtual world, commonly “work-family dichotomy” or known as traditional employees were widely shared based on rigid and demanding workplace requirements where the majority of the workforce were men while most wives stayed at home to care for family responsibilities and otherwise support their husbands’ careers (Bruce and Reed 1994; Kanter, 1977). However, the changing process throughout the years has transformed the norm of the traditional support system to the involvement of the “nontraditional” employees (women, the disabled, the elderly, students, and men with family responsibilities). In Malaysia, women start to involve in various economic activities since the pre-colonial days especially in agriculture and marketing alongside men (Omar, 2003).

From time to time, the ambiance of the workforce has changed and nowadays women are participated in various sectors even in the men dominated sector like engineering. After Malaysia’s Independence in 1957, women’s entry in the labor force increased from 30.8% in 1957 to 45.7% in 2005 (Economic Planning Unit, 2006-2010). This shows that the involvement of women in the workforce has become crucial for the economic growth of the country. There are three factors that contributed to the significant increment in
